General Fall Watering Tips

Taper the Schedule: Water less often as the weather cools down. Lawns and established plants need significantly less water in September and October than during peak summer.

Water Deeply: Maintain deep, infrequent soaking sessions every 7 to 10 days for lawns (or follow regional guidelines) to encourage strong root growth heading into winter.

Time It Right: Water during the early morning hours (around dawn) to minimize evaporation and prevent ice formation on walkways as nights grow colder.

Use Drip Irrigation Efficiently: For shrubs, trees, and desert landscape plants on drip systems, reduce frequency to about twice a week through October
